CITY AND PROVINCE.

What We Heard at the Rooms of the Young Men's Christain Association.

A Tour Around the World—One of Our Pioneers Who Went to Japan.

Membership, 116.

Young men welcome at the rooms.

Average attendance at the Reading Room in August, 23.

A chess club is to be formed, and Mr. A. J. Rowbotham has consented to be present once a week and give the boys "points".

The beautiful flowers at the rooms this week were from the gardens of Mrs. John Robson and Mrs. Butler.

The young men's meeting was successfully started on Saturday evening last; eight young men being present. The service to-night is to be conducted by Mr. Wm. Dee. All young men are invited to spend a pleasant hour at this service.

The attendance at the Sunday service, Sept. 9, was 61. Rev. Jno. Reid made a short address, speaking on the value of Young Men's Christian Associations, and calling attention to the Convention to be held at Seattle this month. At the close a substantial collection was taken up for the expenses of the Convention.

A ladies committee is now being formed, who will take under consideration the matter of making the Reading Room one of the most attractive places in the city. The plans embrace much that is new, and it is hoped that when carried out will make the Reading Room a place where the young men of the city will be glad to come.

To accommodate the young men constantly looking for rooms and board, the Association desire to have at the rooms a list of such places. If persons having rooms to let or boarding accommodation for young men will send word to the Association, giving street, number and price it will greatly help the work.

The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Hon John Robson; First Vice-President, R Erskine; Second Vice-President, D Spencer; Third Vice-President, J L Beckwith; Recording Secretary, D E Kerr; Treasurer, H G Watterson; Directors, Messrs. T M Henderson, J N Turnbull, W S Hampson, A C Flummerfelt, W Walker and A B Erskine.

The World's Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, held in Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 15th to 19th, was one of the most important ever held. The President was Dr. Von Scheele; Vice-Presidents, Mr. Geo. Williams of London, Count Bernstorff of Berlin, and Dr. Warner of New York City. There were addresses of welcome by the Bishop of Visby and Baron of Ugglas. The Convention was held at Stockholm at the special invitation of the King, and he with the Crown Prince took much personal interest in the arrangements for it. Each day was full of interest and many lines of Association work were carefully considered. One of the features of the fourth day was a banquet tendered the delegates by the King and Queen at the Royal Palace at Drotingham, at which the King himself presided. There were 400 delegates present, 60 of which were from America. Among the German delegates were Count Bernstorff, Counsellor to the Emperor, and Count Puckler. In the English delegation Mr. Geo. Williams, founder of the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. M. H. Hodder, Mr. Hind Smith and Mr. E J. Kenedy, General Secretary at London.

The work at Vancouver is progressing finely. Five hundred dollars have just been spent in repairs, alterations and new furnishings for the rooms, and now they are second to none on the upper coast. They are to be represented by a good delegation at the Seattle Commission. Mr. G. A Charnock, the General Secretary, is a man full of life, and believes fully in association work.

Some of the members are away on a hunting trip up the island.

Mr. J. Brengan, of Seattle, formerly an active worker here, was at the Rooms last week. He is chairman of the Reception Committee at Seattle now.

Mr. Teague, the General Secretary, leaves here Tuesday morning for Tacoma, where he will attend the Secretary's Conference. He goes from there to Seattle to be present at the Convention.

The following gentlemen have been elected as delegates to the Convention at Seattle: Rev. John Reid, Mr. R. W. Roper, Mr. T. M. Henderson, Mr. W. S. Hampson, Mr. James J. Daley, Mr. H. Roper, and Mr. F. W. Teague.

Mr. Geo. Hague, manager of the Merchants Bank of Canada, Montreal, and a director of the Montreal Associations, was at the Rooms on Saturday. He takes a great interest in Association work and inquired particularly as to the work being done here. He said on leaving, "when the Association here got ready to erect a building you may send to me for a subscription." When will that be?

Mr. T. A. Harding, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Washington, D. C. Association, and representative of the Executive Committee of the Pacific Northwest, is here for a few days. He will conduct the Sunday afternoon service, at the Rooms, making it especially attractive for young men.

AROUND THE WORLD.

An Old Pioneer Leaves for an Extended Trip.

T. A. Collin left this afternoon for San Francisco and will take a trip around the world before returning to Victoria. For many years Mr. Collin mined in the Omineca and Cassiar country, and was one of the lucky holders of a claim in the last-mentioned place. During the year 1868 he visited Old England and on his return to Canada he performed the unparalleled feat of returning on foot from Fort Garry to Quesnelle. He was nearly six months making the journey across the Rocky Mountains, and reached Victoria in 1870. During his long jaunt the weary traveler lost his gun and was compelled to kill his pack horse to secure food. Mr. Collin has leased his farm in North Saanich and expects to return in a few years to settle permanently in this province. A number of friends were at the outer wharf this afternoon to bid adieu to the old pioneer.

SCOTTISH LITERATURE.

VIII GAVIN DOUGLAS.

Gavin Douglas was born about the year 1474. He was the younger son of the fifth Earl of Angus, and he was educated for the church. He became Bishop of Dunkeld, and was one of the most distinguished men of his time. He lived, however, in stormy times and was mixed up with the turbulent scenes of the Douglas faction. When that faction was driven from power he fled to England to the court of Henry the VIII. He was proscribed as a traitor, and the revenues of his bishopric of Dunkeld sequestrated. But he did not live long to feel his loss, he was stricken with the plague, and died in London in 1522. Douglas wrote two original poetical works, one entitled "The Palace of Honor," an apology for the conduct of a king, addressed to James IV. The poet represents himself as seeing in a vision a large company travelling towards the Palace of Honor. He joins them and relates the particulars of the pilgrimage. His sacred work "King Hart," represents a metaphorical view of human life. The human heart is personified as a king in his castle, with the five senses around him; he is attacked by Dame Pleasance, who has conquered many a king, but at length Age and Experience come to the rescue, and King Hart is set free.

Douglas gave an entire translation of the "Aneid" in the Scottish language, being the first version of a Latin classic into any British tongue. In the passage of the descent of Æneas to the Infernal Regions, we read thus in Douglas:

"It is right facile and ath gait, I thee tell,
For to descend and pass on down to Hell.
The black yetts of Pluto and that dark way
Stand ever open and patent night and day;
But therefra to return again on height,
And here above recover this air's light,
That is difficile work,—there labour lies."

The original poems styled "Prologues" are esteemed amongst his happiest efforts. He resolved, he said, to write wholly in the Scottish language:

"And yet forsooth, I set my busy pain,
As that I couth to mak it braid and plain;
Keeping na Southron, but our own language,
And speak as I learned when I was ane page."
BOYDEN.

A JAPANESE EDITOR.

A Visitor to Canada—Story of Randal McDonald.

Among late visitors to Ottawa was Mr. Oda, one of the editors of the Rising Sun News of Japan, who is on a mission connected with his paper. From his partner, Mr. Muryama, he brought a present to Mr. McLeod, Q. C., of Ottawa, in recognition of services performed by that gentleman twenty years ago in writing up the possibilities of trade with Japan across British America. This Muryama was in his youth a pupil of Ranald McDonald, an adventurous young British Columbian, son of Chief Factor Archibald McDonald, who forty years ago penetrated the then mysterious country of Japan. In one of Mr. McLeod's publications the story of Ranald McDonald is thus given:

McDonald, born in Astoria, educated in Red River and Canada, in sheer adventure, took passage in a whaleship bound for the North Pacific waters on the express stipulation that when the ship should be off the coast of Japan he was to be permitted to leave her in the pinnace or small boat he bargained for and took. This was about 1848, when the rigor of the Japanese decretal of exclusion was carried out in utmost rigor even against shipwrecked mariners. McDonald presented himself as a castaway. His total baggage was a small box, with his books, viz:—Bible, euclid, histories, etc., for his ides was, if spared, to teach, and himself learn. He was conveyed by land and sea, from Vesso, the extreme north of Japan, to Nagasaki, in the south, the then sole port open to any foreigners, and that only to the Dutch, and even to them, under very close restrictions. There he was put to a series of most severe ordeals of his courage, veracity and motives. He faced all, and braved all, with great tact, though at times, as he told me, he thought every moment they would chop off his head. At last, in assembled court, full of armored pageantry, he was told to sit down and bow his head, like all the other people, including all the "nobles" present, to the ground. At a sign, all did so, McDonald alone excepted, who stood staring at the Governor. At last, in a burst of admiration, His Excellency rising exclaimed in Japanese, "You have a big heart." From that hour he "lived in clover," as Hildreth says of him, they making him, however, as the historian says, "teach them English." Many years afterwards in reading of the English and American treaties with that Power recognized in the name of the chief interpreter, or one of the chief interpreters—for they always act in "double" in Japan—that (viz., Muryama), of McDonald's brightest and favorite pupil. The same, I believe, who, about 25 years afterwards was first Ambassador of State for Japan at Washington.

YOU PAY YOUR MONEY, ETC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—I should certainly do myself the distinguished honor of treating the cowardly attack of your correspondent "Victim" under "you pay your money," with the silent contempt it deserves, as it is a well-known fact, not only here in Victoria, but in every small town, that writers of such correspondence are too lazy to attend to their own business and too envious and mean to allow others to do what they have left undone. Look at the merchants how they fight and lie about each other, and look at the doctors and dentists and see how they pull each other to pieces. See the newspapers how they fight! Is it any wonder then, that these quassi disciples of the photographic art, should squeal when I visit their little city, pay my license, distribute $50 or $75 per day in wages, and other necessary expenses and supplying during my short stay here 750 to 800 dozen photo's, which will bear the strictest examination, and I am now two weeks behind in my work. Go on gentlemen, I am well pleased to see that you have brought us into notice. As regards the "crank" who does me the service of bringing my business before the public, I have only to say, that if he goes into a tailor shop, or even one of the photographic studio's mentioned in his letter, and has a sitting for a dozen photos, he will be required to leave a deposit, and no one knows that better than the editor himself. I am obliged for your courtesy in allowing this reply, and invite the press and all the critics to see my work. Respectfully, R. H. GARDINER, Manager Photo Company.

[In justice to the photographers of the city it must be stated that the letter signed "Victim" was not written by any of them.—ED.]

FILLED HIS HEAD WITH BUCKSHOT.

Cheyenne, Wyoming, Sept. 15—Robt Bull and Joseph Ferris are ranchemen whose claims adjoin on the Little Poboagie river in Fremont County. Last Tuesday Bull, who is a bachelor, eloped with Mrs. Ferris during her husband's absence. Ferris overtook the pair and filled Bull's head full of buckshot and brought his wife home. The man who did the shooting surrendered to the authorities. He is a pioneer and was a Union veteran and has many friends.

A JAP RECEIVES FATAL INJURIES.

San Francisco, Sept. 15.—A Japanese servant employed at a Post Street lodging house missed the elevator this morning as it ascended. He caught the bottom of the elevator but relaxing his hold fell into the elevator well to the bottom, four stories below. His injuries will prove fatal.

SHIP SYREN CONDEMNED.

New Bedford Sept 15—The ship Syren, 822 tons, coal laden from Baltimore to San Francisco, encountered a gale on June 28th. She sprang aleak, put into Rio Janeiro and has been condemned. She was insured for $7,000.

RANSOMED FOR $5,000.

Haverd, Sept. 15—Silvestre Garcia Bargo, Mayor of Ma'arzas, who was kidnapped last week by bandits while on his plantation has been set at liberty. He paid $5,000 ransom.

THE REBELS DEFEATED.

London, Sept 15—Bombay advices state the Ameer of Afghanistan has won a victory over the rebels under Ishak Khan in the north. The Ameer's troops captured the stronghold of Kamard. Among the prisoners is Ishak Khan's father-in-law. The Ameer's lieutenants are following up the success.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Chicago, Sept. 15—Chairman Brice of the National Democratic Committee, and representative Democrats from Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, held a secret conference at the Palmer House yesterday morning. Immediately after hearing Mr. Bride's annual report, which lasted far into the afternoon, it was rumored that the Democratic Committee decided to open a vigorous campaign here in the belief that Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa may be carried. The conference decided against establishing a bureau for the Northwest at Chicago. The Chairman of Representatives from the Northwestern States demurred and Chairman Brice demanded a guarantee that the States would go Democratic. These could not be given and Brice then demanded aid from the Northwestern States in carrying New York, Indiana, New Jersey and Connecticut. He was asked to give a guaranty but could not and the conference adjourned without practical result. Brice was severely criticised by some members of the conference.

COLLISION AND LOSS OF LIFE.

Madrid, Sept. 14 — The steamer La France, when entering Port Suez, Canary Islands yesterday, ran into the Italian steamer Sud Amecica from Montevideo, which was at anchor. The Sud America carried 261 passengers and a crew of 67 men. Eighty-one passengers, mostly immigrants, and six of the crew were lost.

BARTELLOT AND STANLEY.

London, Sept. 14—A despatch from St Paul de Leando states that Major Bartellot was shot on July 19th. Eman Camen's head Arab and his men thereupon ran off to Stanley Wells, where Jamieson was making arrangements with Tippoo Tib for the organization of an expedition.

The papers are unanimous in the opinion that Major Bartellot was murdered through treachery, and at the instigation of Tippoo Tib. It is further stated that there is now little room for doubt that Stanley also suffered a like fate at Tippoo's hands. "If Tippoo has proved disloyal to Bartellot, why not to Stanley?" The entire absence of news from Stanley for the past fifteen months gives color to these auspicions."

There are those, however, who intimate acquaintance with Bartellot lead them to assume that his death was the result of his intolerant manner and nowise attributed to the machinations of the king of the slave traders. Bartellot, those gentlemen assert, was a pronounced Martinet, and his murder, in their judgment, was probably due to his unwise and unreasoning severity in dealing with his subordinates.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, Sept 14—The Ameer of Afghanistan reports he has captured a fort occupied by the rebels under Ishak Khan at Kharmad, together with many prisoners, including Ishak Khan's father-in-law.

The Viceroy of India has informed the Government that his reason for postponing the proposed mission to Cabul was that he was assured the Ameer would conquer the rebels, and he did not desire that British officers should be present at the butcheries that were certain to follow.

Floods in the Canton of St. Gall, Switzerland, have submerged 15,000 acres of land. The crops are destroyed and many villages have been abandoned.

The rumor that Goschen will replace Mr. Smith as leader of the Government party in the Commons, is becoming widespread, but nevertheless attracts few believers. While it is thoroughly understood that Smith will be transferred to a higher branch of parliament, a large number of persons are inclined to believe that Goschen's excursion to the lord-ship is improbable, for the reason that although he is a splendid debater, he lacks the tact requisite to fill the place, as his several encounters with the opposition have shown.

AMITIES WILL PROTEST.

TO THE EDITOR.—Information from a reliable source has been obtained by our club that it is a fact, that Rathburne, Gallagher and Marsh, three professional players have been engaged at great expense, by the Donald team, to play in the tournament at Kamloops. It is but fair to the citizens of Victoria, and especially to those who have contributed towards our expenses to know that we have to contend against a team thus strengthened. As the $300 prize in the tournament was to be contended for by clubs in British Columbia and the Northwest Territory the Amities do not consider it fair to import players from the United States and Manitoba, and intend to enter a protest, in which it is expected Vancouver and New Westminster teams will join them. THOS. H. BAKER, Secretary Amity B. B. Club.

SULLIVAN-KILRAIN.

Boston, Sept. 15.—John L. Sullivan, with Mahoney McElvary and Dan. Murphy leave this city on Monday for New York where they will meet Charley Johnson, of Brooklyn, and post $1,000 in the Clipper office as a forfeit for Sullivan to fight Jake Kilrain. The fight will be according to London prize ring rules, to take place within 100 miles of New Orleans for $2,500 to $10,000 aside and the championship of the world. It is reported here that Geo. Law of New York, and Charley Kempland of Brooklyn have agreed to find $10,000 for Sullivan with the proviso that Joe Coburn shall be Sullivan's mentor.

An Enemy's Tribute.

A Government street hotel keeper writes to the morning paper to say that he has taken offence to a letter which appeared in the TIMES last evening and has stopped his paper. He is good enough, however, to add that he has "taken the TIMES for years, believing it to be a fair-minded exponent of public opinion and a defender of the rights of all law abiding citizens." The hotel keeper takes the matter more to heart than the photographer, who replies in this issue. The question we would like the high-heated Highlandman to answer is this: "Were the photographers not Boarders of his, would he have made himself so conspicuous in the controversy?" We are sure Mr. McDonald will, when he cools off, subscribe for half a dozen copies of the TIMES to receive as the balm he has inflicted upon us and to relieve his conscience of a wrong unintentionally committed.

THE SEWERAGE QUESTION.

For years past the columns of THE TIMES have been devoted to advocating the necessity of a complete and proper system of sewerage for the city. This question is now again to the front and we hope on the road to consummation in the near future. The Board of Aldermen meet this evening, in special conclave, to examine the proposed alterations in the PICKERING plans, as suggested by ALDERMAN HARRIS. It has always been conceded that the plans of Messrs PICKERING and CROMPTON were what was required in order to carry out a proper system of sewerage for the city, and the only opposition to the scheme was on the ground of expense. The plans were carefully compared with other plans submitted at the time, and were chosen as the best adapted for the purpose. This being the case, it will be wrong if an attempt is made to doctor them. Any suggestions for deviating from the original plans, must be received with great caution. An attempt to substitute different material, or curtail the elaborate details of the system of PICKERING, with a view to lessen the expenditure, may result in endless expense and disaster to the whole scheme, thereby retarding this the most desirable of all our proposed improvements.

During the debate at the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen, it was stated that Messrs. PICKERING and CROMPTON only offered to "do $450,000 worth of work and no more." If the archives of the city hall are searched, it will be found that that firm proposed to the council of the time, to perform all the work as laid down in the plans for the sum of $450,000, and further offered to take the amount in bonds of the city, or what was equivalent thereto.

Under the circumstances the proposal of Alderman WILSON to accept the offer of Messrs. PICKERING & Co, should receive serious consideration, and if any tinkering of the present plans is sanctioned, before being put in execution, the opinion of a competent authority on city sewerage should be first obtained. The majority of the citizens require the bill, the whole bill, and nothing but the bill.

It were well also if the Board of Aldermen should, if they have time to-night, while on the sewerage question, to take into consideration the adaptability of Messrs. OLSEN and GABRIEL'S patent pipes for drains. They seem to possess many of the necessary requirements, especially in lightness, smoothness of surface and cheapness. His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, with His Worship the Mayor, and several other gentlemen, made a thorough examination of their composition and mode of manufacture to-day.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

At a convention of Cardwell Conservatives at Mono Mills, held yesterday, R. Evans announced his retirement. R. S. White, editor of the Montreal Gazette, and a son of the late Hon. T. White, was nominated in his place.

The Montreal Gazette, a Government organ, condemns the Government for taxing the boxes containing fruit, when at the same time fruit is on the free list. No sensible newspaper could do other than condemn such childish legislation.

The Hon. EDWARD BLAKE received $2500 from the Province of Ontario in pleading before the Privy Council the case of the Ontario against the Dominion Government and the St. Catharine's Milling Co., in which provincial rights were involved; the money has been handed over to the Minister of Education to be applied to scholarships in the Political Science Department of the Brunswick University.

Our morning contemporary quotes "let the shoemaker stick to his last." If the person who wrote that proverb had written instead "let the printer stick to his case" the Colonist might have been without an editor. Next to Mr. Dunsmuir's declaration that "too much education is going to be the ruination of this country" we know of nothing more at variance with common sense and the sentiment of every free born Briton. These principles will never flourish among a people who are free and equal like they are in British Columbia. They will on the other hand work ruin to those who advocate them. It was all very well to tell the shoemaker of a century ago to "stick to his last" but the honest worker of to-day who has brains is liable to hold up his head and to consider himself as good as any other man; and why shouldn't he? He has just as much right to be heard as the printer who has become an editor or anyone else and if his ideas are not broader than those of the latter then they are not worth much.

OUR MUSICAL COLUMN.

Criticism of the R. E. Church Concert—Choral Society Wanted.

When the last rehearsal for the sacred concert by the Reformed Church choir and others was held last Saturday night, it was anything but assuring to those in charge. Nothing seemed to go right. The chorus was simply unmanageable. Prof. Strauss was nervous and everyone went home very much dissatisfied with the rehearsal. It is very often the case that an unsatisfactory final rehearsal generally means a good performance on the concert night, and this concert on the whole was no exception to the rule. It seemed as if all concerned were trying their best to make that adage come true. Demi Semi Quaver was glad to see so many present in the Reformed Episcopal Church on Wednesday evening last. It showed that there are a large number in Victoria who like good music and do not think it too much to pay a dollar for such a bill of fare as presented that night. About 250 people must have been present. Before entering into a criticism of the various items, Demi Semi Quaver would like to say a word against this wholesale taffy business as illustrated in Wednesday's Colonist. First of all our Colonist friend gives the whole of the performers a dose collectively by telling them they presented a "very pleasing appearance, being in full view of the audience." Did he imagine the chorus was going to hide under the benches, be jammed behind the organ, or down into the basement? Next "Mr. Robson was in excellent voice" and rendered "comfort ye" in a highly satisfactory manner. Then the chorus "and then the glory of the Lord" which would undoubtedly have called forth animated applause, but for the fact of the place being a sacred edifice noise was not allowed, and therefore not expected. Our friend perhaps is not aware that applause is never given at sacred concerts in any place. Here are a few more of his stereotyped phrases, "most creditably and pleasing manner." Mr. Warlock has a "true tenor voice." Mr. Kent's solo was "an able effort." But Demi Semi Quaver need notgo any further. Any one who has read the report and who was present at the concert cannot fail to be disgusted with such a nauseous dose of flattery. It cannot be pleasing to the vocalists themselves, and the public do not want it. Why cannot a fair and impartial criticism of our musical performances be given instead of the lavishing of praises all round and indiscriminately?

Mr. Robson opened the concert by rec. and air, "Comfort ye" from the Messiah. He is possessed of a powerful tenor voice, but this solo was just a little too much for him. His voice sounded rather strained and husky on the high notes; his phrasing in the recitation was very fine, his voice showing careful study in the runs, singing very closely to the music. With one little exception in the air, where the singer was at fault for a moment the piece was very well rendered.

The chorus "Amid the Glory of the Lord" was also well sung but the basses and tenors were too strong for the sopranos and altos, altos being especially weak. The attack was very good, not the slightest hesitancy being observed by the different parts. "With Verdue Clad" from Creation, by Mrs. D. R. Harris, was a very fair rendering of this difficult solo. Mr. Strauss did not give the lady very much assistance. He seemed to be holding her back and Mrs. Harris had to beat time with her hand in order to get Mr. Strauss to play in the way she desired. Mrs. Harris' voice is rich and clear and her high notes were sweet and well sustained. "In Native Worth," by Mr. Warlock, was not by any means brilliantly sung. In the recitation Mr. Warlock took the wrong note at starting, and begged the organist's pardon. Mr. Strauss held the note down until Mr. Warlock struck it. Without desiring to be severe it may be said the solo was weak and uncertain throughout; the singer seemed to be groping after each succeeding note. "How Heaven in Fullest Glory Shone" by Mr. Kent, was sung in good style but was a shade too low for his voice. The low notes could not be heard two seats from the front. Mr. Kent scarcely did himself justice in this selection. Recitation and air, "On Mighty Pens," by Miss Mount, was by far the best solo in the first part of the programme. This lady, who is possessed of a fine clear soprano voice, well trained and in good control, deserves credit for the manner in which she rendered her solo. Rec. and air, "The People that Walked in Darkness," by Mr. J. G. Brown, a late acquisition to musical circles in Victoria, was very well rendered. He is possessed of a very powerful baritone voice and made the most of it in this difficult selection. Mr. Brown's pronounciation was a feature of his solo, every word being distinctly heard and understood. Indeed, with the exception of Miss Mount and Mr. Brown, this was the fault of the soloists in the first part. The chorus "For Unto Us a Child was Born," was fairly well rendered, the sopranos singing splendidly, the altos doing their part nobly. The bassos were very weak on the runs indeed, and only two or three could be heard. The tenors were inclined to hold on to some of the notes too long, and in that part of the chorus, Wonderful Counsellor," there was a tendency to hurry which was only kept down by the very steady beat and sign of Prof. Sharpe, who was all action, his hand going up in the direction of each part at the moment they were to come in. Indeed, the credit of the piece is mainly due to him.

The second part opened with the air "I know that My Redeemer Liveth," by Miss Cridge. Miss Cridge has a soprano voice of a very bright and fresh character and her singing of that fine solo was very enjoyable, every note clear and distinct, and the words plainly and intelligibly sung. "Lift up Your Heads, Oh ye Gates," was the best chorus of the evening and could not be improved upon. Air, "Let the Bright Seraphim," by Mrs. Swenger, was the solo of the evening. Her splendid soprano voice, under complete control, was indeed a musical treat. In the most difficult and intricate passages Mrs. Swenger seemed to sing without effort and completely at ease. Too much praise cannot be given this lady for the splendid rendering of this most difficult solo. The trio, "On the each Living Soul Awaits," by Mrs. Jones, Mr. Worlock and Mr. Kent, was not a very brilliant piece of singing. Mr. Kent's solo was the only redeeming feature in it. He sang very well indeed; otherwise it was a failure. Mrs. Helmcken did not sing her solo "Jerusalem." Mrs. Swenger kindly consented to take her place and sang in a rare manner "But Thou did'st not Leave His Soul in Hell." There is not the same scope for Mrs. Swenger's voice in this as in her former solo, but her rendering was very fine. Rec. and air, "Deeper and Deeper Still," by Mr. Robson, was sung very well and did him credit, his voice sounding free and clear, and especially in the air "Waft Her Angels to the Sky," his voice went ringing through the church clear as a bell and with great power. "How Lovely are Thy Dwellings, Lord," solo and anthem by Mr. Worlock and the R. E. Church choir, Mr. Sallaway conducting, did not add much to the programme. The chorus was lame and uncertain. Half of the choir seemingly did not know the piece and never once looked up from their book to see if in time with the conductor's beat. The "Hallelujah" chorus was very well rendered for the small number of voices, for indeed all the choruses were defective in that respect. The basses and tenors excelled themselves in this grand chorus. The sopranos were inclined to drag especially in that passage, "King of Kings and Lords of Lords." The altos were not heard at all. This brought the concert to a close. The honors of the evening fall on Mrs. Swenger and Miss Mount. "Demi Semi Quaver" knows how much work and how great the responsibility there is attached to giving a concert, the programme of which is composed of classical music entirely, and Prof. Strauss must be heartily congratulated on the success attending his work. It must be borne in mind that the soloisters and choristers were all amateurs with the exception of Prof. Sharpe and Demi Semi Quaver thinks, bearing that in mind, that it was a great success. Refreshments were served in the school-room which were no doubt very much enjoyed by those partaking of them.

DEAR ED.—It is too much of a good thing to expect a criticism of a concert when I have to pay to get in. That old time passport of "Times reporter" would not do at the sacred concert. Demi Semi Quaver had to pay his dollar with the rest of the boys. I'm going to kick against this. Why didn't you send me a ticket, or did you get left yourself? I heard it whispered that the TIMES would be left out this time. But I must have that dollar. It would break my heart to have to pay my way for once. Perhaps you could get it refunded.

"Demi Semi Quaver" since his first letter, urged the formation of a choral society or some such organization. No fitter opportunity than the present could be found for so doing. For the last few weeks a chorus of nearly 40 voices have held weekly practices and sometimes triweekly with an average attendance of about 25. Now it is not too much to say that that chorus contained a majority of the best voices in Victoria. What a splendid nucleus for a choral society those voices would make! There would not be the slightest difficulty in increasing the chorus to 100. There are numerous institutions in this city requiring funds and deserving of support and if some society was formed with the avowed object of giving concerts, oratorios, etc., Demi Semi Quaver is certain that the public would lend a generous support. If my suggestion given in a former letter is acted upon at once, two or three performances could begin this winter and a handsome sum realized for Victoria charities.

A good conduction would be required and for a thing of this kind a young man would be best, as he would not be so liable to get excited and nervous and incline the choristers with the same feelings. Demi Semi Quaver thinks that Prof. Sharpe is the man to undertake this business but he cannot do it alone, and some one must help him to bring a few of our leading gentlemen vocalists and musicians together to arrange matters. Mr. Kent, Mr. Robson, Mr. Sallaway, Prof. Sharpe and a few other energetic young men should take the matter in hand. Let no time be wasted. Don't wait for somebody else to move, but call round and see each other about it. Demi Semi Quaver feels sure that you will decide on forming some such an association.

A great many people do not like Scotch music, complaining that it is not pretty nor pleasant to listen to. An incident occurred in a backwood village in western Canada, not long ago, which shows what power and pathos there is to be found in almost all kinds of Scotch music. A party were snowbound in the village hotel and amongst the party were two gentlemen—both musicians—on a Scotch vocalist, the other a German professor. Speaking about music the Professor said he could not find anything in Scotch music that could move a person's feelings. The Scotchman immediately wagered that he could make the remainder of the party, who were all Scotch, laugh, cry and dance, by turns. The wager was accepted and shortly afterwards, the Scotch vocalist proceeded to play "Duncan Gray came here to woo, ha ha the wooing o't" and during the progress of the piece the whole party were laughing heartily. Suddenly changing into "The Auld Scotch Songs" there was not a dry eye to be seen amongst the party. As suddenly changing into "Tullochgorum," in an instant they were on their feet and dancing the "Reel of Tulloch," tables and chairs being dashed aside, and even the Professor, catching the excitement, entered into the dance. The landlady of the hotel, who came in to see what was the matter, thought her guests had all gone mad, and the Prof. admitted his opinion of Scotch music was changed from that time forth.

When the "Hallelujah" chorus was first sung before George III, His Majesty was so charmed with the beauty of the music that he rose to his feet. Ever since that time it has always been customary among British audiences to follow the Royal example and rise during the rendering of that grand piece of musical composition. On Wednesday evening it was observed that only two ladies rose from their seats when it was sung, which goes to show that Victoria audiences are either insufficiently educated in these matters or are indifferent to custom and Royal precedent.

Demi Semi Quaver has been asked to thank Mrs. Harris for the beautiful button hole which, with her usual thoughtfulness and kindness of heart, she provided for each of the singers at the R. E. C. Concert. DEMI SEMI QUAVER.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, without relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, in a few months, was cured. —Susan L. Cook, 909 Albany st., Boston, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I ever tried. I have taken it for Scrofula, Canker, and Salt-Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach. —Millie Jane Peirce, S. Bradford, Mass.

CHAPTER IV.

MATRIMONIAL.

The scene changes. We are across the sea. But it is still a school. Are we never to be done with schools? Well, no! Life is a school, and the wise are never done learning.

The scene, by your leave, is a German university town. Time, several years before the opening of the humble tale you have done us the honor to follow thus far. On a giant cliff above the town stands the most magnificent ruin in Europe. Below, the blue Neckar rushes out from its mountains and seeks the great Rhine beyond. You know the town, Heidelberg.

An American family were spending some months there. With them was the pretty daughter of the household, a girl of 17. Among the students at that time was a young man from the United States. He was barely 18, but large, strong and manly in physique, with dark hair and eyes. He was precocious in every way; noted for his wide range of study, as well as for his strength and courage. He was, besides, the son of rich parents, who had indulged his every whim from the time he was born. In brief he was a fiery youth, who knew no law but his own will.

Hundreds of parents from the United States visit the old German town every year with their young lady daughters. The university dates back to the year of our Lord 1386. It is very famous. Hundreds of American boys attend its classes every year. But this particular boy, with the flashing dark eyes, who loved his own way, met the particular maiden of 17 one day at the Hotel Victoria. With the other hundreds we have nothing to do.

Fate willed the meeting. The dark haired youth mostly decided what followed, the first part of it at any rate.

The girl was a giggling, weak willed creature, with poodle dog eyes and forehead, and a doll's red and white face. She had the simpering, affected ways of a school girl, who cannot for one moment get rid of the consciousness of her sex. The dark haired boy's room mate fancied himself madly in love with her. His friend saw it with regret.

"I'll cure you of this nonsense, Frank Broughton," he said to himself. "I'll go and make love to Miss Myra myself. I'll cut you out. The girl will throw you over. Then I'll throw her over and go home for the summer, and you go with me. You'll thank me for breaking you of this blessed foolishness."

That evening, with his graceful, careless bow and smile—the scapegrace was fascinating—the dark haired youth made his way to the young lady:

"Miss Myra," he said, "it will be a beautiful sunset. Will you and your mother give me the pleasure of going up the mountain with you?"

The red and white girl simpered.

"Why, la! mamma," said she, "shall we go?"

Mamma said, "I think we may," with that degree of alacrity, veneered by dignified reserve, which is due of an occasion when a managing mamma scents a possible son-in-law in a rich and highly connected young man.

It quite took away the breath of Frank Broughton. In five minutes they were off, before his very eyes.

If, reader, you are of a guessing turn, you will know the rest. Well, the girl was pretty, with her peach like cheeks, and her eyes of that color which the milliners call "peacock blue." The dark haired youth, who went in for cutting his friend out to save him from folly, was himself of a passionate, susceptible nature. The walks and rides up the mountain were finally continued on his own account.

What would you have? A month later the same three went up the mountain. Mamma discreetly lingered in the shadow, in the great square of the magnificent ruin. In the shadow in the smaller square at the front of the magnificent ruin, the dark haired youth who had his own way, pressed Miss Myra's babylike hand, kissed her on her babylike lips and whispered in her babylike ear:

"In a month I'm coming home to marry you."

"And Miss Myra blushed and said:

"Why, la, how could you?"

That was the very question he asked himself many a time afterward. Frank Broughton was avenged!

In a month they were married, the boy and girl. The youth's parents opposed feebly, but Philip Dumoray had always had his own way. Miss Myra's mother helped on the match in all the haste consistent with regard to the best appearances. Had she not been an American mother of the highest standing it might have even seemed that she feared the prize would slip through her fingers.

The young people set up housekeeping in New York. Twin sons were born to them within a year. Then it was that Philip Dumoray faced the great new truth, that a man who has a mother-in-law, a dull, silly wife and a pair of babies can't always have his own way. What could even thunder and lightning do against a hill of putty?

Myra Dumoray developed such astounding capacity for emotion that Philip could scarcely believe his own senses. Strange, too, but the emotion was always of a disagreeable kind. Scenes began to take place that thoroughly alarmed the youthful husband, and then thoroughly enraged him. His household was comfortless. It was something new not to be comfortable. Matters went from bad to worse between them. Once he had said impatiently:

"What in thunder is this mess cook's brought in? Do you call that coffee, Myra? I wonder why you never have anything fit to eat in the house?"

Perhaps, like a man, this strong young fellow would not have noticed that other things were so slouchy, if the household had happened to have a good cook. But the tender point of the masculine gender is its stomach.

"When you married me, who'd a thought you'd ever been so cross. You would marry me. And now you're always grumbling, and me not at all well! Boo-hoo-hoo!" remarks Mrs. Dumoray.

He pushed back from the table and strode out of the room. Myra sent for mamma. They counseled together. When the male monster returned both women wore an air of martyrlike resignation that exasperated him beyond measure.

It went on so for days and months. What might have been expected from the self will and undisciplined temper of Philip Dumoray? He was moody and half savage at home. Myra would shut herself up and sulk and cry for hours. Mamma was there to protect her darling, and perhaps it was well she was, at times. Philip was sincerely fond of his little boys. That much at least is to be said for him. He amused himself and them every day. One afternoon he missed them.

"Where are the babies, Myra?" he asked his wife.

"Oh, I sent them away to spend a month at nurse's mother's in the country. I'm not well and they made me nervous."

"Why, woman, what are you thinking of? Have you no natural feelings toward your own children?"

Philip's mother had never let him out of her sight in his childhood, so rare and precious had she held him.

Myra put her handkerchief to her eyes.

"I never thought I'd live to be insulted in this way. And you would marry me, you know!"

"I didn't know I was marrying a fool," muttered Philip, savagely.

"Mamma! mamma!" shrieked Mrs. Dumoray, and fell back in a hysterical fit. Mamma came running in. "He has been cruel to my poor darling!" Once more the man had to beat a retreat. The moment he was out of the house the abused wife dried her eyes and sat bolt upright. Philip wandered aimlessly to the park and sat down, restless and discontented. Was all married people's life like this? But [illegible] had had his own way, to be sure. His marriage had been one of those cases wherein all a man's best friends can do is to stand back and see him make an ass of himself. And while he was musing on matrimony, he saw a bright little phaeton flash by. Inside of it was his wife, gay and pretty, chatting with one whose polite attentions were not a compliment to a lady, married or single. He went home in a fury. When presently the wife in all her poodle dog prettiness came back a scene took place which it will be quite as well not to repeat.

It may be mentioned that similar scenes followed. The discord became common talk. Everybody took the part of the wife. Was she not a sweet, pretty, childlike creature, whom no one could help loving? A man who would mistreat her was a brute and a monster. Who would blame her if she did seek a little relief from the wretchedness at home? There was no lack of those who did not like Philip. His imperious temper and haughty frankness had not tended to draw friends around him. By degrees he got the name of a tyrannical husband and a bad man. He heard the whispers about himself. He saw his wife flirting openly with fops and rakes. He became a young fellow fit for desperateness.

One evening he came home earlier than usual. The light burned low in his wife's parlor. He looked in. The man whom he had seen riding in the park with Myra was there. His arm was about her, he was murmuring low words in her ear, her head was on his shoulder.

Philip was like a tiger. With one hand he gripped his wife's arm, and flung her against the wall. He took her companion by the throat, before he had time to recover from his first daze. He throttled him until he was purple, and threw him out the door, and down the steps. He was a giant.

Then he clasped his hands to his temples, and sat down to think. A crumpled rose-colored object against the wall attracted his sight. It was his wife lying there insensible, in the gay dress she had worn to receive that man.

He had laid violent hands on a woman.

Myra was in a dead faint. He gathered her up and carried her to her bed. He sent for the doctor. When she recovered consciousness, and her eyes fell on him, she fainted once more. She was ill for many months.

From that night she never could endure the sight of her husband. He wandered about as one accursed. Her side of the story got abroad. Philip never told his side, he was as proud as Julius Cæsar.

His wife hated him with a steady hate. It was surprising that a creature so shallow and fickle could cherish a passion so deep and constant. Feelings are often easy enough to develop, though, when they are on the wrong side.

Dumoray was at heart of a chivalrous, noble nature. He had used violence toward a woman, his own wife. That thought never left him, night or day. He hated himself. Could he do nothing to make amends? Nothing. He might live to be a hundred years old, and make every hour a period of expiation, but he could never be the same in his own eyes again. That thought was the most agonizing. A noble soul always cares more for its own respect than for the respect of others.

Myra could easily have had a separation. She did not seem to care for it, however.

He mentioned it to her.

"You want to get rid of me, now that you have killed me, do you?" she said, querulously.

"God knows I do not, Myra," he said. "If there was anything that would make things right God knows I would do it."

"There is nothing that will make things right. I hate you! Look what you have brought me to. And you would marry me. What do you bring all those children in here for? You do it to vex me. You know I hate children. There, I am going off again. Give me my drops and go away."

He looked at her. Was she losing her mind? She caught the thought in his brain, with a mental keenness she had never shown before her illness.

"Yes, I'm going crazy, and you have made me so. Give me my drops, I tell you, and go away."

He obeyed. He went into the corridor, and walked the floor. He sent for the family physician, and asked him anxious questions. The family physician answered shortly:

"Your wife is an opium eater."

What a life was in store for these two!

The high born soul needs only one lesson. Philip had had his lesson. He was never the same again, from the night he had struck his wife. He became the gentlest, most patient of men. His boys were growing to be bright, intelligent little creatures. He devoted himself to them. He was in place of a mother to the bereft infants. All the happiness of his life he found with them.

By degrees his wife quite lost her mind. He would not put the insane woman away in an asylum. He accepted the care of her as part of his punishment. He tended her wants and humored every whim of the poor, crazed creature. She retained still gleams of recollection. The most vivid was her hatred of Philip. She never forgot that in her most demented moments. She knew him and her boys. For the children in her sane days she had had little fondness. Now one of the gleams of remembrance that was left her told her Philip loved them. Therefore she hated them. Her insane fancies took shape in one intense idea—revenge on Philip Dumoray.

She became a cunning, dangerous lunatic. Philip had her watched night and day. He kept himself away from her. The sight of him irritated her uncontrollably.

He slept in the room alone with his boys. He would not permit them in care of another at night, lest harm should come to them from their insane mother. It was touching to see how he tended them and how much they were to him. From caring so constantly for these helpless ones he came to care for others, too, and think of them. He lost himself in self forgetfulness and sweet thoughtfulness for others, this selfwilled, fiery tempered youth who had always had his own way.

Time glides on alike to the happy and miserable. What cares Time? He will not hold his glass back to give one hour more of youth to a Cleopatra. He will not hasten it to shorten by so much as one second the torment of a martyr in flames.

Philip Dumoray's boys were 4 years old. All the tenderness of his powerful nature went out to them. They slept in a little bed beside his own. He hung over them long and fondly one night, studying each child-feature, listening to their softly falling baby breath. How lovely they were, lying there in their white bed! The rosy faces were flushed with sleep, the milk white baby arms were flung above their heads. The rings of bright hair hung damp and warm about their pretty brows.

"God bless them!" murmured Philip.

He went to his couch and was shortly in a deep slumber. He had not slept so soundly for years, he recalled afterwards.

How long he had been asleep he did not know. He was suddenly awakened with an awful horror at his throat. He only knew something was strangling him, something was being pressed steadily down upon his mouth and nose. He threw his arms convulsively upward. His hands caught a human form, which glided from his grasp. With a last effort he threw the thing, whatever it was, from his face. It was a pillow. He tried to spring to his feet but fell back, weak and helpless. He saw his wife gliding like a spirit out of the low window that opened on the veranda. How could he see her in the darkness? What was that light?

Flame and smoke burst in through the door from the hallway. The flame licked the ceiling and lapped the door. The smoke spread through the room. He was suffocating again.

Great God! His boys! His darlings!

With the last effort he could make in that desperate moment, he staggered toward their beds, and fell across it with open, empty arms.

The children were gone!

A Warning.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from diseases of the throat and lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of tubercle germs into the system and when these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly, and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the head, causing catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to proceed will in time cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your throat, lungs or nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief.

A Woman's Despair.

"Death would be preferable to this awful, dragging down sensation and aching back," despairingly complained a suffering mother. "And the worst of it is," she added, "there seems no cure for it." "You are mistaken," replied the sympathizing neighbor to whom the sufferer complained. "I suffered for years just as you do, and found no relief till my physician finally prescribed Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which cured me, and I have ever since been well, and the wealth of India would not induce me to be without the remedy, if a like affliction should return." "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Boring for Coal.

Mr. Samuel M. Robins, Superintendent of the Vancouver Coal Company, Nanaimo, has made arrangements with Mr. T. D. Jones to bore at the bottom of the No. 2 Shaft, so as to see if there is a seam of coal underlying the one now being worked from the No. 1 Esplanade shaft. It is expected that the famous Wellington seam of coal will be found to underlay the seam now being worked. If that expectation should be realized, it will be a rich strike for the Vancouver Coal Company and the citizens of Nanaimo generally.

Hymen's Bonds.

W. H. Redmond left for Vancouver this morning on the steamer Yosemite. He will be united in marriage on Monday next to Miss L. Martin, a charming young resident of the Terminal City. The good wishes of his many friends in this city follow him, and THE TIMES joins in extending congratulations.

DORRING-HELGESEN.

The marriage of Charles Doering of Vancouver, to Miss Sarah Jane Helgesen, only daughter of Hans Helgesen, Esq., of Metchosin, was celebrated at 9 a. m. to-day, in St. Mary's church, Metchosin. Rev. Mr. Bolton officiated. Mr. Decker acted as groomsman, and instead of the customary bridesmaids, there were three page boys—Masters Helgesen and Charley and Lorry Whitlaw, an innovation in marriage ceremonies that "took" the fancy of the company immensely. They were dressed in black velveteen suits, white ruffled vests and white stockings, and, looked exceedingly handsome. The bride was dressed in cream nun's veiling, with the customary orange blossoms, tulle veil, &c. As the party filed out of the church, Miss Fisher played the Wedding March. The party breakfasted at the residence of the bride's father, about fifty friends sitting down at table. Ex-Mayor Fell and several other Victorians were present. The newly married couple left about 11 o'clock for Saturna, where they embarked on the Umatilla for San Francisco and the south where the honeymoon will be spent.

OUR TOWN MAJOR.

Saturday's Address to the Ladies—A Sermon Without a Text.

Another week, which has been enlivened by marriage chimes, has passed. The orange blossoms it seems, bloom more frequent on the approach of winter than any other season of the year, and more so this season; and if old King Coal the merry old soul, has done nothing else he has hastened marriages. Love will keep up the heat, and defy the bitter blasts of winter, even if coal is $10 a ton. Apart from the merry marriage bell, some of you have had your farewell of your favorite out door game, lawn tennis. Your bats and tennis ball will be now laid up to give place to other balls, and your preceptors will have leisure to bat the old chap round the stump. Some of them have taken upon themselves to bat the Major for telling the truth which is more than a great many do. As the immortal Burns puts it:

"Some books are lies fra end to end,
Some greater lies were never penned,
'Em minister ha been kenned,
In holy rapture,
A rousing whid at times to vend,
An' nail it wi the Scripture.

Still the poor old Major has his fair friends on his side and can snap his fingers at all the world.

You see, the Major, with your help, "got a move on," as we say in the Greek, to cleanse your beautiful city, and our roses, and your roses, dear ladies, will bloom the brighter when we have the sewers. Now we want water, good, wholesome and plentiful, not stint; then well we become clean. "Cleanliness is next to Godliness," they say, and "the nearer the church the farther from God." So will it be when we have the sewers and plenty of water. As for the last maxim, people must use their own discretion, as Christ said of the temple, "My house was a house of prayer but ye have made it a den of thieves." We have made great strides in cleansing ourselves of other matters; we have a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; men and doctors are being fined for fast driving through our streets, endangering lives; the men have to pay $5 a head and the doctors all the way from nothing to a dollar. How comes the difference? During the long winter evenings, be you kind to the poor fellows; endeavor to make their homes attractive, by little attentions from you; like wild beasts we become domesticated.

You, ladies, on the pinacles of the city, or away down in the bay, must rejoice in another batch of blue jackets. It's with you now:

"Raise up Jack, let John sit down;
For I know your's outward bound."

So says the old Liverpool Crimping house song, and there's more truth than poetry in it. The Cormorant leaves and the Espiegle takes her place. How many hearts remain and how many takes passage beneath the "jacket blue," as the old Cormorant steams out of our beautiful waters! Anything for a change from monotony. Most of the Espiegle men, they say, have been here before; well, if they have, they know their way about without being told. Make the jolly tars welcome Jack leaves his heart in every port, and still keeps it for his black-eyed Susan away on the chalk cliffs of Albion.

You all enjoyed the turn out of our "bowld soger boys" this afternoon; how brave and gay they looked in all the pomp and circumstances of war, with colors flying and drums beating—but no, they had no colors, but it's all the same in the vulgar tongue. Wouldn't it be a pity if cruel war from over the sound, should visit your peaceful shores. What a pity to use the brave lot we saw this afternoon "prancing so gaily to the tap of the drum" as food for powder. Our glorious war, when shall the time come "when the lion shall lay down with the lamb and nations shall learn to war no more." When our land grabbers deliver up their ill-gotten spoils, both the events will happen about the same time. It will be a time when there is no use for land or war either.

You will all go to church to-morrow; so will The Major; but he wishes it to be distinctly understood that he does not go to any particular church to boom it—he simply goes to sleep during the sermon. It is not often he hears anything worth writing about, but if he does he will write, especially if people are "cursed by God and envied by man" for being rich. The Major will give what he hears to the public if he thinks it will improve the state of affairs free from any rancor, or hate, and he doesn't care a rap who may "appreciate" his good intentions or likes him well enough to listen to him once more.
THE TOWN MAJOR.

MILITARY PARADE.

Field Day in Beacon Hill Park—Artillery and Rifle Co. Inspection.

In accordance with the Brigade orders issued by Lieut.-Col. Holmes, D. A. G., Military District No. 11, the troops in garrison, consisting of C Battery, R. C. A., the batteries of the B. C. G. A. and the Victoria Rifle Company, were reviewed by that officer at Beacon Hill Park this afternoon. The turn-out of the troops, both of C Battery and the city corps, was smart and soldierlike. The wearing of the haversack and rolled great coat across the left instead of the right shoulder looked, in eyes accustomed to other modes, somewhat curious. There were many little incidents of detail only visible to the martinet. The C Battery in appearance and soldierly bearing was faultless, and our civilian soldiers, who must not be judged with too critical an eye, compared as favorably as could be expected with the elite of the Canadian artillery. It has always been a great fault with inspecting general officers in the United Kingdom, when reviewing volunteer corps, to heap on praise without the slightest attempt to point out visible errors and defects. It remained for His Royal Highness, the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, to rate the volunteer army on their shortcomings, which His Royal Highness did in good, plain Anglo-Saxon. With the example of the splendid discipline of the C Battery before them, the B. C. G. A. should in point of efficiency be second to none in the volunteer army of the Dominion.

The troops were drawn up in line in review order, the C Battery on the right, the headquarters Batteries of the B C G A in the centre, and the Victoria Rifle Company on the left. Promptly at 3 o'clock the Inspecting Officer came on the ground, accompanied by his Orderly Officers, and received the usual salute. The troops presented arms, the band played the first bars of the National Anthem, and the officers saluted, which the Inspecting Officer returned, and the troops shouldered arms. The Commandant passed down the line examining minutely the troops and their arms and equipment. The inspection over, the inspecting officer took up position at the saluting point and the line wheeled into open column, right in front, for the march past. The marching of the Companies was very good indeed, and that of the City Volunteers as fair as could be expected. The time given by the band was excellent, the ground was in splendid condition and everything tended to make the march past a success. Of course the number of files in each division or company were rather on the small side, and consequently the "dressing" as the troops filed past was on the whole very fair.

The C Battery were under the command of Major Peters, and marched off to the quarters on the conclusion of the inspection. The B. C. G. A. were under the command of Major Prior and the Victoria Rifle Company, Capt. Wollcott. Lieut. Ogilvie, R. C. A., acted as A. D. C. to the Inspecting Officer, Col. Holmes. Lieutenant Lang, Royal Engineers, formed one of the brilliant staff that accompanied the Inspecting Officer. Before the conclusion of the review the B C G A and the Victoria Rifle company were put through a series of battalion movements, which they executed with precision scarcely to be expected. There was a large and fashionable concourse of citizens on the grounds. It would be well at the next military review to have the review grounds kept as free as posible from the intrusion of onlookers.
